QUESTION ARISES ABOUT ROAD WORK

WHERE SURVEYORS ARE CUTTING THROUGH CORN FIELDS

HAVE THEY AUTHORITY

Some Think They are Overstepping Their Bounds—Local Highway Department Says Not

"Can state engineers working on surveying for the new primary state road go into a farmers cornfield and cut down a swath of corn in their necessary work of surveying for the new right-of-way for the road?"

There seems to be some questions about the authority of the engineers to do so. The question has arisen following the work of the engineers on the farms of H. L. Groves and T. L. Richey, about two miles northwest of Barnard and on the farms of Marion Ripley and Granville Gray, about 4 miles south of Maryville.

On the farm of Marion Ripley, about four and a half miles south of Maryville, a swath of corn two rows wide and about a quarter of a mile long was ramped down or cut in the necessary work. Similar damage was done to the corn on angular swath in an 80-acre field on the Granville Gray farm adjoining. Mr. Ripley said this morning he was not notified of the intentions of the engineers before the surveying started and that he had not yet estimated the damage.

The reason for the surveying is for the location of the state primary road along the ridge line to expedite drainage and to give a direct route that will be much cheaper in hard surfacing.

It was the opinion of one Maryville lawyer that the engineers could be ordered from the farm and be arrested for trespassing.

But the local office of the highway department has interpreted the latest revised Missouri statutes to show that the engineers are within their rights and that damages may be ascertained and will be paid for in the way provided by the statutes. They base their interpretation upon section 21 of the revised road statutes.

Section 21 of the 1921 revised laws of Missouri relating to roads, highways and bridges, has the following about the damage in the construction or location of state highways:

"Whenever the construction or location of any state highway, or any part thereof, or the obtaining of right of way, or road building materials for the construction or maintenance of such roads shall require that private property be taken or damaged; or where a change of Gradient, a detour or an elimination of grade crossing is to be effected; or where the proper and economical location of a highway requires the changing of the channel of any stream, or the right of way to any deposit of any road building material, or any water supply; or any water-power sites and lands to be used in connection therewith, which may be necessary for the proper and economical construction and maintenance of said roads, then the commission, in the name of the state of Missouri, shall have the right to purchase or lease the necessary land, or the right of way to any deposit of road material, water supply, or any water-power sites and lands to be used in connection therewith and if compensation therefor cannot be agreed upon, just compensation may be ascertained and the property acquired and paid for in the manner as provided by law for the exercise of the right of eminent domain by railroad corporations in this state, and in determining the damages or compensation to be paid the owner thereof, the court or jury shall take into consideration the benefits to be derived by the owner as well as the damages sustained thereby."

STATE MUST GIVE STRIKE PROTECTION

Says Henry J. Allen

FORMER KANSAS GOVERNOR GIVES FORCEFUL TALK

IS A GOVERNMENT DUTY

Father of Industrial Court Holds Chautauqua Audience with Address Pulsating with Interest

Tonight

8 o'clock—"The Witching Hour," a drama.

Tomorrow

9 o'clock—Junior Town

2:30 o'clock—Musical prelude, Welsh Male Quartet.

3 o'clock—Lecture by Krekor Gaghdigian, an Armenian.

"The state has a right to protect the people in any strike in an essential industry" declared Henry J. Allen, former Governor of Kansas, in his address on "The party of the third part" at the chautauqua this afternoon.

"The government regulates our life from the time of our birth to the time of our death," Governor Allen continued, "then it certainly has a right to protect us from the wranglings of capital and labor and the results that follow."

The audience was clearly in sympathy with the views expressed by the former Governor of Kansas. Frequent applause interrupted his plea for a clearer understanding of the industrial situation.

The speaker told of the reason for the establishment of the famous industrial court of Kansas. It was brought about by the coal strike of three and a half years ago, he told his hearers. All the miners of Kansas had walked out, although the majority of them were eager and willing to return to work. However, due to Alexander Howat, head of the coal miners' unions of Kansas, they were prohibited from returning to work.

Governor Allen sent out a call for volunteers and 20,000 men and boys responded to the coal, and the acute situation was relieved. Soon afterward, the industrial court was established by the Legislature of Kansas and has settled many difficulties between capital and labor since.

Realizing that he was speaking in perhaps the best agricultural county in Missouri, the former Kansas chief executive said that the farmers never have an opportunity to indulge in a strike; all they did was to pay for a strike.

"I wonder what would happen if the farmers of the country would go on a strike," the Governor continued, "what if they would refuse to grow any wheat or corn until their demands were met? Why there would be a sweep of protest from every state in the Union. Yet those engaged in the agricultural industry are compelled to pay the price of the numerous strikes in essential industries of our country."

As his lecture proceeded it developed that the "Party of the Third Part" was the great mass of the public which is concerned in strikes and economic disturbances only because it suffers thereby. He pointed out that in four great basic industries necessary to life in this country, 1 1-2 per cent of the total population of the country can be classified as employers and 6 1-2 per cent as employes. Yet between them they squeeze the remaining 92 per cent of the population, a great patient mass whose only resistance is its very passivity. It was to protect this "Party of the Third Part," as well as the employers and employes in the basic industries themselves, that the Kansas Court of Industrial Relations was established.

He told of his difficulties with Alexander Howat, and to the surprise of the audience spoke rather kindly of Howat than otherwise. He said that the Kansas mine leader worked as a boy under the system by which operators worked their men in the most impossible conditions, and after they paid their meager wage, robbed them at the company stores. With such a training Howat's soul was warped and soured, and he is motivated today by the bitterness engendered in the past.

Gov. Allen showed how employers and employes alike are turning more and more to the Industrial Court, and how wage contracts are now being made between unions and their employers in which working conditions are left to the Industrial Court.

AMERICA BOWS IN REVERENCE AT HARDING STATE SERVICES

WASHINGTON WITNESSES PAGEANTRY OF SORROW TODAY

EPOCH-MAKING CORTEGE

Slowly, Mournful Journey Of 63 Minutes Carries Body To Capitol For Simple Services

Washington, Aug. 8 — America spoke her grief today at the passing of a well-beloved friend, the twenty-ninth President of the United States. America spoke it in a pageantry of sorrow, spoke it in tones of majestic reverence that is seldom heard by a nation.

An all-great and powerful people showed its respect for a departed leader and the Capital paid its last honor to Warren G. Harding.

Hardly had a torpid sun swung quarter way across a smoky sky when the great black gates of the White House swung wide and all that remained of Warren G. Harding came forth from its last night's resting place under the broad roof of the White House into the hands of the people and thence through endless lanes of a bowed and reverential citizenry to its destination where the dome of the Capitol showed mistily against a foggy, heavy sky.

And there under the great dome that has covered the nation's heroes, reverential hands laid his body, wrapped only in the glorious mantle of the flag, on the catafalque so the rich and the poor, the mighty and the small, might pass by the bier and follow his mortal shell to the grave.

A Solemn Cortege

Down historic Pennsylvania Avenue, which echoed the sad Lincoln cortege, the triumphial march of Grant's and Pershing's men home from war, the grief that attended the passing of Garfield and McKinley, today marched a solemn cortege as the final honor to Warren G. Harding. Home he came after a 3,000 mile journey that a Caesar might have well envied. Down this same broad avenue that twenty-nine months ago Warren G. Harding rode with the greatest honor to come to any man, the President of the greatest republic on earth.

Then he was filled with the flush of life, keen, alert and alive to the great task ahead of him.

Wilson In Parade

On that bleak March day rode the man who was relinquishing that position, shrunken, white faced, lame, a victim of the terrible toll that America exacts of her highest servant. Today that same white-faced man, Woodrow Wilson, rode behind Warren G. Harding to the shrine of the nation's departed great.

Then the Avenue was gay, boisterous, its buildings afire with flags and bunting, a day which brought happiness and a flush to his face and a similar one to the woman beside him.

Today the Avenue is as silent as a tomb, its buildings draped in black and the brilliant color of the flags dimmed by the crepe in the half lifeless air.

It was, however, the same acclaim. But where before it was an acclaim of a hopeful living today it was a silent acclaim for the dead.

The Procession

In the procession, which marked the final passing of Warren G. Harding from the White House to the Capitol today and his passing too, from the state world affairs, were all manners of men. There were the great of the nation and the small.

There was the new President, Calvin Coolidge, in his face already a realization of that burden, suddenly set upon his shoulders by an inscrutable fate.

Two Presidents

There were two past Presidents, William Howard Taft and Woodrow Wilson. The passing years have but lightly touched the former since he last went down the Avenue, but have made a deep impress upon the other.

Mrs. Harding Brave

There was a saddened and grief-stricken woman, Mrs. Harding in her black of mourning but her pathetic braveness challenged the admiration of all.

Behind her carriage came other relatives of the departed President. Two sisters, Miss Abigail Harding, "Daisy," the President called her, and Mrs. E. E. Remsberg, of California, who made the journey across the continent on the funeral train, and others.

There was the general of the armies, John J. Pershing, with towering head and shoulders astride his nervous mount.

The Officials

There were the saddened members of cabinet, four of whom were with their chief when he sickened and died on the far west coast. There were justices of the Supreme Court, solemn-looking in their official garb. There were the grief-stricken members of the Senate, many of whom had served with him in the tempestuous days before he attained his high place. There were members of the House of Representatives, lame soldiers and sailors, wearing on their breasts the coveted medal of honor, the nation's highest gift to its fighting men. There were veterans of American wars for the century past. There were newspaper correspondents and personal friends, who accompanied the dead President on his illustrious journey to Alaska and who watched for many long and wakeful hours at San Francisco and saw his passing.

Endless Lane Of People

All of these were there and more, to follow the black caisson, flag-draped, through the endless lanes of sorrowful people.

Government officials and representatives of several states began to assemble at the White House to form the solemn cortege as early as 9 o'clock.

A Hush Over City

Promptly at the stroke of 10 o'clock an expectant hush seemed to fall over the central part of the city.

Then there was a crunching of gravel and six smooth chesnut colored horses swept around the drive to the main entrance drawing the black polished caisson on which, from time memorial, immortal heroes have ridden to their last long sleep.

A Lone Bugle Call

Out on the still air of the morning floated the stirring strains of the Presidential call from a lone bugle. Inside the great East Room of the White House, where in normal times it was passed by carefree children and inside, the scene of many brilliant social functions, stood a dozen stalwart men, grave faced, who stepped forward to the center of the room.

There lay the metal and flag-draped casket on a catafalque, squarely beneath a huge glass chandelier. They tenderly lifted it and slowly treaded their way across the glazed floor to the wide portal and across the broad piazza to the caisson where the restless horses chaffed and pawed.

Then Chopin's March

Some distant army band started the strains of Chopin's March, weirdly beautiful and conveying some of the matchless majesty of death.

The flag-draped casket slid noiselessly onto the caisson. A low-voiced order and down the circled driveway beneath the stately elms, started the last drive up the avenue which had seen his greatest triumph.

The Cavalcade Was Late

The actual start of the cavalcade of sorrow came at 10:17 a. m., more than a quarter of an hour late. The delay was caused by the laborers of the military pallbearers in strapping the flag-draped casket to the caisson. With the crunching of wheels in the gravel-way, the cavalcade moved slowly down through the executive grounds and into the historic avenue. There the lead was taken by General John J. Pershing astride "Jeff" his famous mount.

Following closely behind was the staff, the metal of horseshoes sounding a sharp staccato on the pavement.

All Military Branches Represented

Then came an army band, playing a low-noted dirge, then three regiments of cavalry, and following these were the more ponderous artillery pieces.

LARGEST CIRCULATION IN NODAWAY COUNTY

Army Life at Ft. Sill

W. H. Burr of Maryville, instrument sergeant of Battery C, which is encamped at Ft. Sill, Okla., for annual military activities, has written a letter to his wife, Mrs. W. H. Burr, in which he relates some interesting features of the camp life there. The following is a portion of the letter:

"I have about a fourth of candle left and shall write you until it goes out. The reason I am using only a fourth of a candle is because it is so hot that a whole candle can't stand up.

"This is certainly a sickly looking bunch of men. A number are on the sick list now due to the intense heat, dust and hard work.

"At 5 o'clock in the morning we get up, dress, answer roll call, and clean our battery quarters. Then we get our feed wash our kit, get the guns ready, horses harnessed, and riding horses saddled. Of course these things are done systematically. There are a number of Batteries here and of course there is much rivalry to see who reaches the field first. You see speed is one of the chief essentials. Of course, harness improperly adjusted may hold up the whole battery. It is my business in this part of the game to help speed up the work. We were the last to get on the field the first day. Today we got out to the field second, beaten only by the oldest battery of three years experience and only by a narrow margin at that . I think we shall come out in the lead tomorrow. Our battery alone is over a half mile long.

"The field work is the severest test of all. The severe heat, the hot winds blowing over the parched prairie grass, and only a little canteen to drink from and it hotter than the water in our stock tank, tries a fellow's metal.

"The object in the field is to see which Battery can get the guns placed for firing first, telephone wires laid, and in fact, everything ready for action.

"Here is when I get the real work out. It is my job to direct and supervise eleven men in laying telephone wire, establishing switchboards, and connections between all guns and commanding posts. Then here is where the particular job begins. I must take up a position far in advance of the Battery, where I can see the enemy, then using a telephone connection with the battery, I set up what is known as an observation post. From this point, with a delicate angular measuring instrument I direct the firing of the entire Battery. In other words I am directly responsible for the guns hitting the targets.

"Of course there will be a high mogul somewhere back of our guns recording the number of hits of every Battery in action. Don't know whether I can keep my nerve when the final contest comes or not. In the afternoon we have officers school. I already have the mechanism of the aiming instruments pretty well worked out."

AMERICA BOWS IN REVERENCE

The infantry followed, then the engineers, marines, bluejackets and finally a battery of national guards, and soon the avenue was revibrating to the cadence of marching troops and horses.

The chesnuts, with their sad burden, stamped into line behind these marching men and horses and one of the most sorrowful processions in American history was underway.

Mrs. Harding Not in Procession

Mrs. Harding did not emerge from the White House until twenty-five minutes after the cortege had started, owing to length of the military escort which preceded the caisson.

She remained standing in the doorway of the White House until her car was ready to move and then she emerged upon the arm of Secretary Geo. B. Christian, Jr. At the last moment, just after the procession started from the White House, Mrs. Harding was prevailed upon to avoid the ordeal of riding slowly down the avenue in the procession. Accordingly, her car slipped out of the procession and, guarded by police and secret service men, was taken directly to the Capitol and there awaited the arrival of the funeral party.

The cavalcade of sorrow deposited its honored dead at the nation's Capital at 11:20 a. m.

A Journey of 63 Minutes

The slow, mournful journey down historic Pennsylvania, amidst crowded sidewalks of sorrowful citizens, took sixty-three minutes.

The mortal remains of the President were then carried to the broad east entrance of the Capitol to the rotunda for the funeral services.

Services Over At 12:01

As the caisson carrying the body of the late President passed the district building, a great children's chorus of childish trebles broke into, "Nearer My God To Thee." Warren G. Harding liked children. It would have pleased him.

The services at the Capitol were brief and ended at 12:01 o'clock. Mrs. Harding and President and Mrs. Coolidge were the first to depart while the other mourners slowly filed round the casket before leaving the rotunda.

Miss Hulet Home

Miss Dale Hulet arrived in Maryville Sunday morning for a visit with her mother, Mrs. George Hulet. Miss Hulet has been teaching in the public schools of Oklahoma City, Okla., for the past two years.

MOURNFUL TOUR ENDS LAST NIGHT

HARDING FUNERAL TRAIN ARRIVED AT 10:22 O'CLOCK

THOUSANDS AT STATION

Caravan of Sorrow Backs in, with Coach Bearing Bier of Late Chieftain Foremost

Washington, Aug. 8—President Harding's funeral train, freighted with the sorrow of the nation, reached Washington at 10:22 o'clock last night.

Although the train was nine hours late, thousands jammed the station concourse, waiting for hours packed against the iron fence that shut off the train platform, to be first to give their silent tribute to the dead chieftain.

The train backed into the station so the funeral car with its flag-draped casket rolled in first, to stop where the little group headed by President Coolidge waited.

The lights in the funeral car cast a brilliant glow in the big train shed. Secretary Christian and Dr. Sawyer were on the back platform. There was no noise in the station, only the throbbing of the air pump on a distant engine.

Mrs. Harding stepped off the car leaning on Secretary Christian's arm and with Dr. Sawyer on her other side. The band in the concourse began playing "Nearer My God to Thee."

Mrs. Harding walked erect, but slowly, along the station platform. While her hand was on Secretary Christian's arm, she apparently needed no support.

The military guard of honor that had stood about the casket all the way from San Francisco also alighted.

Members of the party who came all the way said Mrs. Harding had stood the trip well.

As solemn strains of the comforting old hymn filled the station, the casket was lifted tenderly down through the special door cut in the side of the car. It was placed on a rolling platform.

A single wreath that had been waiting at the station was laid on the great flag spread over the casket.

Slow March Is Begun

The military guard resumed its place about the casket. The uniformed men raised their burden and began moving slowly toward the double rank of non-commissioned officers, who formed a corridor to the President's room.

Meantime, Mrs. Harding had entered a motor car and had been whisked away through a side street to the White House. Her appearance and the reports of those who had made the trip with her from San Francisco set at rest wide-spread rumors that she had suffered a physical collapse.

Secretaries Hoover, Wallace and Work, Attorney General Daugherty and General Pershing walked slowly behind the casket as it was carried down the living lane.

Majestic Strains Fill Building

Speaker Gillett also walked with the party that alighted from the funeral train. The double rank of soldiers forming the aisle came to "present arms" as the casket was carried by, their bayonets flashing in the bright light.

The slow, majestic strains of the old hymn filled the building with soft music as the casket was carried through to the President's room.

Mrs. Harding reached the White House at 10:45 o'clock just as her husband's body was being taken into the President's room at the station. She walked into the house unaided.

Inside the executive mansion she had left six weeks ago the first lady of the land, the widow was greeted only by old friends and members of the family. A plan to have Mrs. Coolidge and the wives of cabinet members to meet her was cancelled at her own request.

President Coolidge gave his formal greetings to his dead chief as the casket reached the head of the aisle of soldiers before the President's room. He stood hat in hand as it passed and then turned to follow slowly with bent head.

Boils

THERE is a reason for everything that happens. Common-sense kills misery. Common-sense also stops boils! S. S. S. is the common-sense remedy for boils, because it is built on reason. Scientific authorities admit its power! S. S. S. builds blood-power, it builds red-blood-cells. That is what makes fighting-blood. Fighting-blood destroys impurities. It fights boils. It fights pimples! It fights skin eruptions! It always wins! Mr. V. D. Schaff, 557 15th street, Washington, D. C., writes:

"I tried for years to get relief from a bad case of boils. Everything failed until I took S. S. S. I am now absolutely cured, and it was S. S. S. that did it."

European Situation is Far More Encouraging

Henry J. Allen, Former Governor of Kansas, Tells Democrat-Forum Reporter This Afternoon

The European countries are getting back to work and the situation is far more optimistic than it was a few years ago," said former Governor Henry J. Allen in an interview with a Democrat-Forum reporter this afternoon. About one month ago, Governor Allen returned from an extensive tour of the European countries.

"As soon as Europe gets back on its feet, the American farmer will come back into his own," Governor Allen continued. "We will begin, once more, our exportation of large quantities of farm products and prices will become more stable."

On the whole, the former Governor of Kansas expressed considerable optimism in the agricultural situation of the Middle West. He said that the farmers of Kansas were hard hit by the slump in wheat prices and that the corn crop there would be the more valuable from a financial standpoint.

The prosperity of American agriculture depends upon the prosperity of the European nations, the former Governor continued, and erelong Europe will return to normalcy in the consumption of our farm products.

Returning to a discussion of the industrial situation of Europe, Governor Allen said that Germany had progressed more than any other nation. Her industries had progressed marvelously since the close of the Worl dWar, the former Kansas executive told the Democrat-Forum reporter. When the reparation problem is finally settled by France and England, Germany will be in a position to meet her war obligations. Germany is in a better position, industrially, than any of the western European nations, the Governor added.

As to Eastern Europe, Governor Allen did not seem so optimistic. Turkey is in the same position she was before the Lausanne conference, he said, and this conference simply postponed the outbreak of hostilities in the Balkan states. Turkey is still "the sick man of Europe," he said, and as soon as the Balkan problem can be permanently settled, the better off European nations will be.

France and England are gradually returning to pre-war conditions, Governor Allen said, and would soon be in a position to resume their world trade. America would be greatly benefited by this resumption of commerce, and the situation looks hopeful, indeed, for the American farmer, Governor Allen assured the Democrat-Forum reporter.

De Molays Will Take Part in Services

All Members Of Local Order Requested To Meet at K. P. Hall at 9 O'Clock Friday Morning

Members of the local chapter of De Molays will meet at the K. P. Hall at 9 o'clock Friday morning in order to participate in the Harding memorial services to be held at the chautauqua tent. All members of the patrol team are urged to wear uniforms and attend the services in a body, and every member of the local chapter is asked to be at the K. P. Hall at 9 o'clock Friday morning.

Two delegates were elected to the annual conclave to be held at Springfield August 29, 30 and 31. Ralph Wilson Eversole, master counsellor, and Wilson McMurry, scribe, will be the delegates from the local order. I E. Tulloch was elected the sponsor representative to the annual meet. M. A. Peery will be unable to attend the Springfield meeting. Capt. Harry Snyder was elected as alternate to Mr. Tulloch.

Some of the local De Molays who are attending the training camp at Fort Sill will be in Springfield for the convention. Gordon Roach, Jack Jones and others will come from Oklahoma, and Stewart Tulloch will go with his father to the meeting. Special rates will be given to Springfield if a sufficient number attend the conclave from here.

Members of the local order are making plans to reorganize patrol and permanent degree teams. Some steps will also be taken to provide club rooms for the local chapter and the regular meetings will be held there. Some rooms will be rented and this will serve as general headquarters for the local DeMolay order.

The officers were not installed last night but the installation probably will be held next Tuesday night. A number of the newly elected officers were not present at the meeting last night.

Labor leaders are still opposed to the court, he said, because labor leaders are secretaries of war for their unions and do not want their jobs abolished, but in Kansas the mass of labor is beginning to see that the tribunal operates with justice. He pointed out that Kansas mined lots of coal during the great coal strike of three years ago and that during the strike of last year Kansas mined more than half of its normal quantity and was able to sell some coal to Missouri, while Missouri mined only 4 per cent of its normal output.

The Supreme court decision a few weeks ago in a packing company case did not wreck the industrial court, Gov. Allen explained, and he showed that the one finding against the court was because it was held that the concern involved was not necessary to the welfare of the people of the state. As a matter of fact, the Supreme court decision gave the law establishing the court a firmer foundation than ever.

Miss Katherine LaSheck, with Harold Wilson at the piano, furnished the prelude to this afternoon's lecture. Miss LaSheck entertained the audience for a half an hour with solos and readings.

Last night's grand concert by the Cambria players was well received and pronounced by the audience as one of the best musical numbers of the chautauqua so far.

H. Frank Lawrence, last years Maryville High School coach, was a visitor in Maryville today. Mr. Lawrence has been attending the six weeks course at the Illinois Coach School.

If Your Engine Could Speak

IT would tell you why, at times, it seems to hesitate, drag and fail to deliver that steady, even flow of rhythmic power which is so necessary if motoring is to be enjoyed. It would tell you that a motor can run smoothly only when the frictional parts are amply protected by a cushion of good lubricating oil, thus, permitting free, easy, noiseless action.

It would tell you that the wrong oil almost invariably causes excessive carbon, loss of power, transmission troubles, fouled spark plugs, and overheating.

The right oil for your car—the grade of Polarine indicated in the chart—means minimized repairs, fewer renewals of parts, greater flexibility, and more power.

Spaces Rows Uniformly
Spaces Seed Uniformly

You can make every row in the field uniformly the same distance apart—just right for a two-row cultivator—when you use the

JOHN DEERE
TRENCH GUIDE LISTER

Come in and ask us to demonstrate the simple, accurate seed drop on this lister. Make our store your headquarters whenever you come to town.

Like all other John Deere Listers, this trench guide machine has the famous John Deere "999" drop.

Spaces the kernels in the row as desired and as accurately as you would in planting by hand.

Genuine John Deere bottom scours, resists wear, opens up a good trench and covers weeds, working successfully in either shallow or deep listing.

Double bail construction keeps the front end of the beam from bobbing—the bottom holds uniformly to its work and the covering equipment covers at uniform depth.

Combined hand and foot lift is another feature you will be sure to appreciate.

2710 E. 76th Place
Chicago, Ill.

The American Tobacco Co.
111 Fifth Avenue
New York City

Gentlemen:

I have always smoked "Bull" Durham, and your advertisements in the Chicago papers, making a strong point of the saving idea, caught my eye. I want to tell you of a little experiment I have just made.

I usually smoke about a package of "Bull" Durham a day, which costs me ten cents.

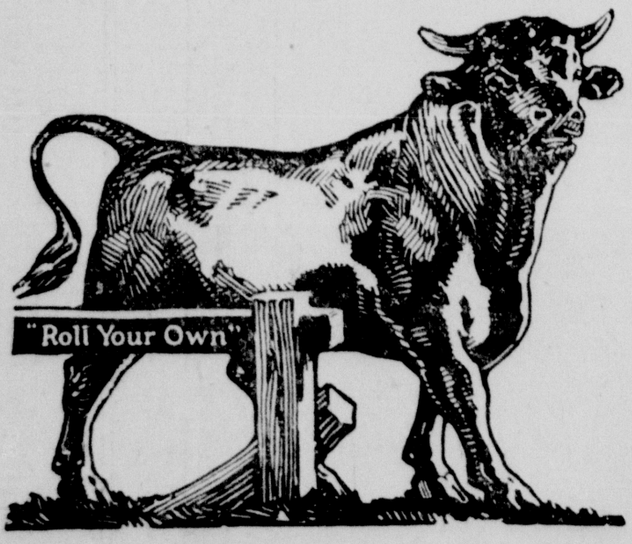
For a week I switched to the tailor made cigarettes and used two packages a day, costing me thirty cents. Figuring this up covering a period of a year, "Bull" Durham cost me $36.50 as against $109.50 for the other kind.

This means a saving of $73.00, which never occurred to me until I saw your ad.

Assuring you that I will always "roll my own" I am

Sincerely,

May 25, 1923. Sam Shaver



With each package you receive a book of 24 leaves of RIZ LA+ the finest cigarette paper in the world.

You will be amazed to see how the use of "Bull" Durham tobacco will cut down the cost of your smoking. Remember "Bull" gives you 50 cigarettes of the best flavor and quality for 10 cents.

This means easily a saving for the average smoker of from $1 to $1.50 a week—$52 to $79 a year.

Seventy-nine dollars will buy lots of things. A radio set, a talking machine, a very fine suit of clothes, a set of tires, the first fifteen payments on a Ford, a good-sized insurance policy.

Hard to roll your own? Not really. Give yourself a chance to learn. Have a sack of "Bull" in your pocket all the time as well as your regular cigarettes. Every time you think of smoking a cigarette pull out your sack of "Bull" and try rolling one.

By the time you've used the sack you ought to be a fair producer. And you'll certainly be a convert to the mild, delightful flavor of the unequalled cigarette that "Bull" Durham makes.

Now try it yourself and write us your experience

Carrying Home Purchases Saves You Money

It surely is convenient to have your purchases delivered to your home.

No one will try to deny it, but have you ever stopped to think that YOU PAY FOR IT?

Some one has to pay for it. That is certain. The merchant tacks the cost of his delivery department on to the prices of his goods and you pay the advanced prices.

We ask you to carry home your purchases and save this cost.

Thus you are not asked to help pay the wages of delivery clerks, for automobiles and their upkeep, etc. A saving worth while, isn't it?
